

Why Tribes?

Tribes are the people you share life with. They are the friends you grow, laugh, and serve with.

We believe TVC thrives when we empower leaders like you to share your faith by leading community. Here are three ways you can lead community:

What's a Community Leader?

As your Community Leader, I'm committed to serving you in three ways:

- » I'll help you get started.
- » I'm here for you as you lead.
- » I'll challenge you to own your growth.

Great Leaders SHARE

Step into the game. – We learn best in the game.

Experience will provide you with reality-tested development. Don't hesitate to step in and start learning.

- » Seek out training at www.tvctribes.com. You'll find timely tips, plans, and resources about the topics you face.
- » Use the Five Development Tools. Take advantage of these tools to own your growth as a person and a leader. Check out each tool at www.tvctribes.com/personaldevelopment

Have a plan. – Starting a Tribe or beginning to mentor will present challenges along the way. Leaders thrive when they start with a plan.

- » Create your Tribe Plan at www.tvctribes.com/lifegroupplan. With this tool, you'll clarify your Tribe's vision and discover how to accomplish it.

Ask people you know first. – Your faith community should start where you are with people you know. Then, invite others to join in.

- » Friends you already hang out with.
- » People you work or work out with.
- » People you share hobbies, interests, service, or a neighborhood with.

Relate to people. – Community happens when people share relationship. Relationships happen when people feel needed, known, and loved. Relate to people this way, and lives will be changed forever.

Enjoy our connection. – All this relationship talk applies to you, too. I want you to feel connected! It's so much easier to be a leader when you share connection with other leaders.

- » How can I best support you?
- » How frequently would you like to connect?
- » See the Tribe Leader Manual for more helpful tips and ideas